EDITORIAL POLICY

Behavior Science Research emphasizes the publication of cross-cultural studies, both methodological and theoretical; annotated bibliographies of social science interest on specific areas, cultures, or topics; and reports of field research methods or data concerning the cultures included in the HRAF files, particularly those constituting the Probability Sample Files (see this journal, Vol. 2, pp. 81-88, 1967). The format of all manuscripts submitted for consideration should follow that of articles appearing in recent issues of Behavior Science Research, especially in regard to footnotes and bibliographic citations. Contributions must not exceed 50 manuscript pages, and articles of 25-30 pages are preferred. Authors should submit abstracts of 50-75 words, which will automatically be considered for publication in Abstracts in Anthropology. The author of any article published in this journal has the right to republish it in whole or in part without requesting permission from HRAF.
